Dr Charles George Everard was born on 29th August 1794 in Gloucestershire, the son of William and Elizabeth Everard. Charles Everard arrived in South Australia aboard the Africaine with his wife Catherine and four children. He was the surgeon to the Africaine and also acted as ship's Chaplain. Before leaving for South Australia he bought, in London, five sections of South Australian land costing him over £400. The family first settled at Glenelg before moving to a town house in Morphett Street. The Everards next settled at Black Forest at the end of July 1838; a portion of this estate they named 'Ashford'.

Dr Charles Everard does not appear to have regularly practised his profession in Australia, preferring to run a farm 'of the mixed type'. He became a JP and was also elected a member of the Legislative Council on which he served his full term of twelve years. He lived at 'Ashford' for 38 years and died, aged 82, on 30th March 1876.
